A DEED AND A WORD.

A little spring had lost its way Amid the grass and fern ; A passing stranger scooped a well,

Where weary men might turn; He walled it in, and hung with care A ladle to the brink : He thought not of the deed he did, But judged that Toil might drink. He passed again, and lo! the well, By summers never dried,

Had cooled ten thousand parching tongues,

And saved a life beside. A nameless man, amid a crowd That thronged the daily mart, Let fall a word of hope and love, Unstudied from the heart; A whisper on the tumult thrown, A transitory breathfil It raised a brother from the dust. It saved a soul from death. O germ! O fount! O word of love!

But mighty at the last! Strobel & Wilken, Importers of Fancy Goods and Grant Turning out the Reporters. On the hat he wears Walnut street, Cincinnati.

Upon What the People are Taxed. Our present tariff duties are purposely made obscure, so that the masses of the people will not know exactly how much they are taxed. There are duties ad valorem and duties specific, duties by the square rod and square inch, frequently combined together in the same article. A gentleman previously engaged in commerce, who understands his subject, has taken the trouble to see what the duties are upon a few leading articles. Look at the list :

THE POOR MAN IS TAXED, On his salt 108 per centa On his pepper On his rice On his soap On his starch On his candles On the sheets of his bed On the blankets that cover him On the carpet he buys On his window curtains On his knives and forks On his window glass On his water pitcher 40 40

This is not the conduct of a public officer who is accused but is conscious of his own rectitude. Such an officer would desire the widest publicity for such an interview. He would throw open his doors that the whole world might know all that was said and done. He would wish the reporters of every journal and that the whole world might know the reporters of every journal and that the whole world might know the reporters of every journal and that the whole world might know the reporters of every journal and the story person must have sleep according to his temperament; eight hours is the average. If one requires a little more or a little less, he will find it out for himself. Whoever, by work, pleasure, sorrow, or by any other cause, is regularly diminishing his sleep, is destroying his life. A man may hold out for a time, but nature keeps close accounts, and no man can dodge her setall that was said and done. He would wish the reporters of every journal and every party to be present at such a public examination of his conduct, and to hear and report everything connected with his denial and defence. He would seek to have the fullest light cast upon every word, act, and purpose, and would scorn to hide anything in shadow and in secrecy.
